Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Fourth Reader Aim of this Series. - The authors believe that schools should place more emphasis upon animated, expressive oral reading. Teachers are doing more today toward the cultivation of an appetite for good literature and the establishment of a reading habit among children than ever before. All this is a splendid work. But a greater emphasis upon interpretative oral expression is now needed. The Relation of Reading to English Speech. - So much has been said of late years about reading for the thought that the beauty and the value of good oral reading have, in too large a measure, been lost sight of. When we recognize the fact that good English will never become a habit of ordinary speech until it sounds well to the ear of the speaker, it must be granted that the main purpose of a teacher of reading is to attune the ears of his pupils to the melody of English undefiled. The most effective means at his command in the schoolroom is the daily exercise in oral reading. The reading matter must, of course, be models of good English. This, however, does not mean that the makers of school readers must avoid all idioms, abbreviated forms, or ordinary colloquial expressions.
